The sharp yelp of a coyote not far away is unmistakable evidence that that thriving, skulking animal has jumped up a cotton tail and is hustling for an early breakfast. At the first peeping of the gray dawn the hunter suddenly hears a welcome sound—the faint and faraway honk-honk of the goose. He examines his gun and notes the direction of the sound. Nagrey and nearer examines his gun and notes the direction of the sound. Nearer and nearer the sound comes, and finally he ventures to take a peop out of the pit and discovers the distant outlines of a large flock spread out V shaped in the morning sky, bearing off to one side. Apparently they have not seen the deroys, and the hunter thinks it is yet too dark. Suddenly the leader is seen to waver, and with loud cries the flock turns and circles around the decoys as if supplications of their genuinoness, but drawing measure at each turn. They have ap-

The real reason for this is that man killing means, sooner or later, the arrival of white men on elephants, with guns, and hundreds of brown men with gongs and rockets and torehes. Then everybody in the jungle suffers. The reason the beasts give among themselves is that man is the weakest and most defenseless of all living things, and it is unsportsmanlike to touch him.
